

EMERGING IDEAS

surface

EYE CANDY

BEAUTY AND FASHION VISIONARIES
CONJURE A HARLEQUIN ROMANCE
WRITER: LEILA BRILLSON

Making them batted and fluttering or doe-like and darkened, women have experimented with their lash lines for ages. And Shu Uemura, the visionary Japanese cosmetic brand, has consistently elevated extensions to art pieces, now teaming up with the wink-wink-nudge spirit of Viktor & Rolf. Sold through the French boutique Colette and inspired by the mime Marcel Marceau, the collaboration has produced three limited-edition designs. The Rhombus set is imprinted with graphic gold diamonds, while the Swirl features dense, leather-like lengths. Pictured here, the Wing pair frames the eyes with paperclip-like loops. Like the saying goes, if windows are the eyes to the soul, why not have elegant curtains to let the world in? colette.fr